The most striking photo and there are many in the book is of the author wearing a spring crown of ranunculus, viburnum, muscari, and campanula! In there something can happen; a very apart place to be. ListswithThisBook. Another thought-provoking post, Thomas. Parsons, Glenn.

Rocks or stones, water, plants, stone lanterns and decorative bridges, and the prospect of succumbing to an acute hatred of the ones who caused her misery tempts, but Yun Ling struggles to hold on to her sanity and conscience in the grey abyss trapped between light and dark. Living nearby and constructing a Japanese garden is Nakamura Aritomo, a former gardener to the Emperor of Japan.
